DUNGEONS DRAGONS

BACKGROUND

You have lived in the city-state of Tyr for most of your life, finding your way there when you were a child after your parents disappeared in the wastes. Taken in by a human merchant family before you could be sold into bondage, they raised you as one of their own and trained you to help guard their wares. Once you started to learn how to fight, however, your adopted family saw your natural talent and enrolled you in a gladiator school, where you learned to fight as a professional, using any means possible to win.

Now you've grown bored of Tyr and joined up with one of your adopted cousins, Suldin, to seek your fortune elsewhere. You know that he wields arcane magic, but you've pledged to keep his dangerous secret from others, as it could get both of you killed. Most recently, Suldin has introduced you to a templar from Nibenay named Vinara. She doesn't seem to be as cruel as the Tyrian templars, and you reckon that she must've done something terrible there to be hiding out here in Tyr, although you can't fathom what she must've done to be so far from her home.

Born into a life of servitude in the forest city of Gulg, you toiled as a laborer until you were sold to a cruel merchant who also had a weakness for gambling on gladiatorial matches. Impressed with your physical prowess and bored of constantly beating you for imagined shortcomings, he had you trained as a gladiator to fight in the local arenas. Little did he know that training you for battle would spell his demise.

One night, after watching him beat servant after servant, you took matters into your own hands and cut your merchant-master's throat while he slept. Fleeing the city and certain reprisal for your actions, you made your way into the Mekillot Mountains, where you encountered other vagabonds living in exile from civilization. Taught to respect the spirit world and how to subsist off of the wild by a thri-kreen shaman named Pak'cha, you became her pupil and strong arm. DUNGEONS & DRAGONS

The seventh of a birth clutch of seven, Pak'cha was born under a blood moon, an auspicious symbol for the Sirocco Dancer pack of thri-kreen hunters from the great desert expanse known as the Tablelands. At the age of her adulthood, she was chosen by the spirit-ancestors of her people to become the next shaman of her pack, and eagerly took to her sojourn to commune alone to learn from them when disaster struck the rest of her pack.

A massive, deadly storm killed all of her pack, including her clutch-mates while she was learning the ways of her ancestor-spirits. When she returned to the Sirocco Dancer's camp, she found them cut to ribbons by the obsidian-shard storm, and vowed to carry their memory by continuing to honor her spirit patrons. Over the next few months, she came to the Mekillot Mountains to form a new clutch, and found kindred spirits in Morg and Ulieth, two other souls adrift in the wastes.

APPEARANCE

Pak'cha is a thri-kreen, which means she's an insectoid creature with six clawed limbs. Two are used as legs; the other four serve as arms, the upper two stronger while the lower two are used for more fine manipulation. DUNGEONS DRAGONS

BACKGROUND

The son of a minor noble from Nibenay, the most opulent city-state in the Tyr Region, Suldin lead a privileged but uneventful life until he met a mysterious old friend of his father who saw potential in him. Learning the outlawed arts of magic and respect for the balance of life known as arcane preserving, Suldin was brought into a secret society known as the Veiled Alliance, defenders of the natural order and protectors of the secrets of preservation magic.

However, his father uncovered his criminal affiliation and threatened to turn him over to the templars of the city. In response, Suldin fled, heading to Tyr, where he heard that an uprising was taking place to depose the sorcerer-king there. Along the way, he met the half-giant gladiator Kindrok, and recently has made the acquaintance of Vinara, another displaced arcanist who was a former templar of Nibenay.

It should be noted that casting spells (using any of Suldin's arcane powers) is illegal within the city-states and might get him arrested by the templars, unless used subtly. Fortunately, Suldin's illusion magic tends to be subtle in nature.

APPEARANCE

Suldin is in his early twenties, and wears his sandy-blond hair short. He wears a delicately-weaved dark blue cloak given to him by his mother, and under his voluminous robes has wrapped strips of cloth tightly to his body. These strips contain the arcane formulae which comprise his spellbook, making it easy to conceal and portable. DUNGEONS DRAGONS

BACKGROUND

Ever since Ulieth was young, he challenged his elders and never gave a care as to what others thought of him. Even among his raiding elven tribe who cared little for outsiders, he was considered a "bad seed." Many in his tribe stayed clear of him though, as strange incidents seemed to surround him, which he later learned was an inner strength calling him to learn the Way (what others know as psionics). Without anyone to teach him to control this energy, he one day unleashed it with deadly results, killing a rival during a heated argument.

Exiled from his tribe, a fate worse than death for some, Ulieth found it liberating. Journeying to the Mekillot Mountains, he soon found that he could start over again with a new group of outcasts, and joined up with Morg and Pak'cha to see where his legs would next carry him.

APPEARANCE

Ulieth wears his brown hair in a loose knot to keep it from blowing in his face when he runs. He wears heavy scale armor made from a giant lizard-beast known as a mekillot and carries a broad shield. Ulieth has learned how to comfortably distribute the weight of his gear while traveling the wastes. He commonly wields a carrikal, a bone battleaxe that he carved and sharpened from a large creature's jawbone, and also possesses a crystal longsword he took on his last raid with his former tribe.

Groomed from an early age to ascend into the ranks of the templars of Nibenay, the enforcers of the sorcerer-king's will, you have always had a driving ambition to become an important leader amongst the people of that glorious and opulent city-state. As with all of Nibenay's templars, upon your induction into their esteemed ranks, you were sealed in marriage to the sorcerer-king. Not satisfied with strictures of law enabling your rise in prominence, you undertook a blood ritual to make a vital bond with the sorcerer-king, in the process gaining a degree of precious arcane ability. You vowed that day to hunt down all foes of Nibenay and seek out those who dared defy your king.

Your first real mission was to leave your home and track down a criminal spellcaster named Suldin, the son of a loyal subject of the sorcerer-king. Finding this outlaw in Tyr, you posed as a criminal yourself, hoping to separate him from his gladiator friend Kindrok and bring him back to face his justice. However, rumors of unrest in Tyr make it dangerous to be a templar here, even from another city-state, so you've decided to take advantage of your newfound friendship for now to keep yourself protected.

It should be noted that casting spells (using any of Vinara's arcane powers) is illegal within city-states outside of her home of Nibenay. Subtlety, especially around Tyrian templars, might be warranted, although Vinara is confident in the authority of her sorcerer-king over all others. If nothing else, producing the symbol of that authority (her deathbone rod) might stay others' hands against her.

APPEARANCE

Vinara is in her early twenties, with salt-and-pepper hair, unnaturally altered from her pact with the sorcerer-king. She wears long black cloth wraps with intricate golden trim. Concealed in the folds of her robes are two deadly gifts given to her by her order - a bronze sickle and an ashwood deathbone rod topped with a small humanoid skull.
